elegancy of her own sex added several of the noblest accomplishments and qualities to the other.

" She possessed these advantages in a degree unusual to either, and tempered them with an exactness peculiar to herself.

" Her learning, judgment, sagacity, and penetration,'together with her candour and love of truth, were very observable to all that conversed with her, or were acquainted with those small treatises she published in her life-time, though she industriously concealed her name.

" Being mother of an only son, she applied all her natural and acquired endowments to the care of his education.

•'" She was a strict observer of all the virtues belonging to every station of her life; and only wanted opportunities to make these talents shine in the world, which were the admiration of her friends.

" She was born on the 18th of January, 1658, and died on the 20th of April, 1708."
